One Hundred Years at the Hollow

Project Description

The One Hundred Years at the Hollow Capital Campaign is a major investment in updating the facilities at Quail Hollow Park and elevating Stark Parks' ability to serve the community. The campaign is focused on implementing some of the top priorities identified in the Quail Hollow Park master plan. Improvements include preserving the historic facilities, enhancing public use areas, educational gathering spaces, improving accessibility into historic buildings, and improving the overall park user experience at Quail Hollow. More specifically, the One Hundred Years at the Hollow Campaign will renovate the existing Carriage House into an accessible space for park events, programming, and public rentals and includes the addition of flushable restrooms accessible from outside, a new accessible parking area, a new HVAC and fire alarm system in the Manor House, the removal of the Levitt House and underground storage tanks, replacement of deteriorating boardwalks, and the addition of a new outdoor picnic shelter.

Stark Parks began the early phase of planning and seeking funding for this project in 2023. The campaign goal is to raise nearly $3 Million in funding to complete the proposed projects by 2029, marking the 100th anniversary of the Manor House at Quail Hollow Park.

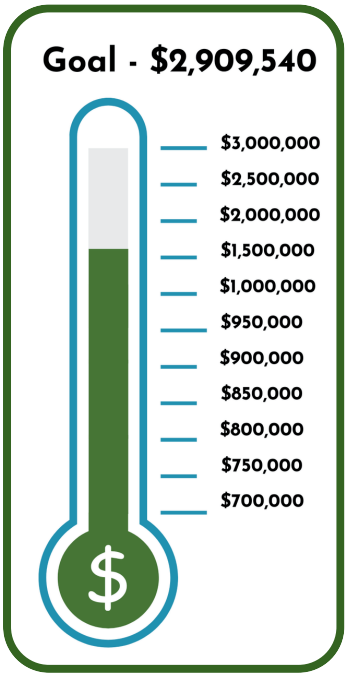

In 2024, Stark Parks successfully secured state capital funds to kick start the design process for accessibility improvements, carriage house renovations, and parking improvements.
